The pilot and co-pilot of the Mohawk Airlines turboprop, a two-engine Pairchild: F-37, were among those killed. Thirty-three persons were hospitalized. There was no fire after the crash.

The crash site, 3 1/2 miles from the airport, is about two miles from central Albany in the sec-tion called Colonic. The flight, which originated in New York City, was a favorite of businessmen coming to Albany for the weekend.

Residents said the pilot might have been trying to make an emergency landing on an eightlane road linking the Colonie section to central Albany, or on a nearby campus of the State University of New York.

The pilot, Capt. Robert Mc-Adams, 44. apparently knew he would not make it to the airport runway, the spokesman for a government investigating team said yesterday.

"The pilnt said be would land short of the runway and he feathered one engine." said Brad Dunbar, a deputy director of the National Transportation Safety Board. The cockpit vnice recorder, which contains crew conversations, was recovered from the wreckage.

Mr. Dunbar, one of 11 investigators, would not speculate about the cause of the crash.

4 Strikes

SAIGON, March 5 (Reuters).-American fighter-hombers, continuing their stepped-up raids this year, have made four more strikes into North Vietnam to ening U.S. air supremacy.

The raids yesterday were made to protect unarmed reconnaissance planes which, in recent weeks, have become targets for heavy North Vietnamese antiaircraft fire.

Over the past four days, 11 such retaliatory strikes have been made by U.S. bombers escorting the spy planes.

The number of so-called protective reaction strikes against the North this year has now reached 78-only 31 less than for the whole of 1972.

In Paris, North Vieinam said today at least 10 children and several women and old persons were killed in U.S. bombing raids over Ha Tinh and Quang Binh Provinces Friday and yesterday.

A dispatch from Hanoi made public by the North Vietnamese delegation to the Paris peace talks repeated Hanni Radin re-ports yesterday that an F-4 Phantom jet and unmanned reconnaissance plane were shot down in the raids over the two southernmost provinces of North Vietnam. U.S. spokesmen in Saigon denied any plane losses. The Hanoi dispatch identified by name several of the children whom it said were killed, describing what they were doing at the time of the attack, Meanwhile, a thunderous blast resounded across Saigon today when a tug pulling three ammunitinn-laden barges hit a Viet Cong

Primary elections often draw small turnouts. Combined with the ability of political parties to turn out the faithful, Mr. Galluo said, this makes primaries very difficult to predict.

Last-minute atatements tend to be more influential in primaries because the candidates are usually less well known, he added, this also makes polling less

Mr. Gallup said that most polls were accurate during general elections when candidates and issues are well known, but listed some polls and polling methods that he said should make the poll

Polling has come a long way, Mr. Gallup said since every national poll incorrectly predicted that Thomas E. Dewey would defeat Harry Truman for the presidency in 1943. The problem then, he sain, was that polling stopped 10 to 14 days before the election and failed to record a last-minute shift of "undecided" voters to Mr. Truman.

Mr. Gallup dismissed as myth the belief of many professional politicians that polis released during a campaign influence the outcome of an election by attracting people to the candidate tagged as the probable winner.

Pravda Calls U.S.-Peking Policy Hostile

By Robert G. Kaiser MOSCOW, March 5 (WP) -President Ninon went to China to exploit Peking's snii-Soviet policies, and not out of concern for peace in Asia, the Soviet Union's official newspaper said today. In the harshest and most authoritative comment yet pub-lished here on Mr. Nixon's trip, a commentator in Prayda the Communist party's organ, gave a thoroughly negative interpreta-tion of the Peking summit meeting.

By implication, at least, this kind of commentary may hode ill for Mr. Nixon's visit to the Soviet Union in May.

According to today's Pravda, Mr. Nixon's voyage did not alter the American policy of trying to maintain "supremacy" in Asia. Proof of this, Pravda said, is America's persistence in upholding all the old elements of U.S. policy-"aggression in Indochina, occupation of South Koren, military bases all around the peri-phery of the Far East and Southeast Asia." Consistent with the Soviet policy of playing down Mr. Nixon's trip, these harsh words appeared near the end of a 2,500word review of world affairs written by Georgi Ratlani, chief of Pravda's American department, Nevertheless, they are a clear signal to the party workers, who study Pravda closely, that this is the line they should take on the Peking summit.

This was a horrible deed and nothing can justify it. I know that the whole Catholic community, in common with our Protestant fellow Christians, will be utterly sickened at the cort of deaths and terrible injury inflicted on innocent prople."

He concluded: "These deaths and injuries should baunt the consciences of the persons respensible for the rest of their lives." Security forces announced the

Socialism Victory In U.S. Is Seen By Angela Davis

MOSCOW, March 5 (AP).-American Communist Angela Davis has told a Soviet journalist she believes that "the time will come for socialism to triumph in the United States."

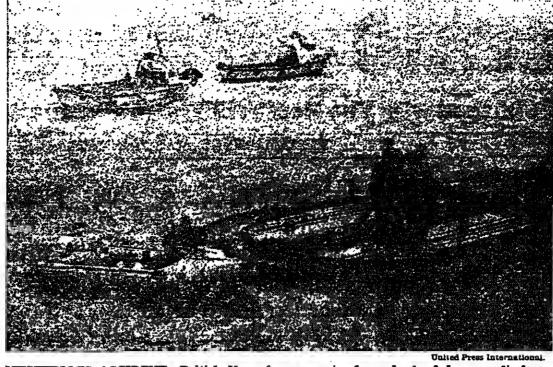

Miss Davis, on trial in San Jose, Calif., on murder, kidnap and conspiracy charges, made the prediction in an interview Friday with Eduard Easkarov, a special correspondent for Tass, the Soviet

She was quoted as saying: "The struggle for the immediate release of all political prisoners in the United States is the struggle against the capitalist system itself, against the ruling circles of the United States, which, trying to preserve their domination, systematically frame up 'cases' against all otherwise-minded per-

N.Y.C. Area Still A Magnet as Corporate HO

NEW YORK, March 5 (NYT). -The New York area continues to be a magnet that attracts corporate headquarters of national and Internalional corporations as well as new administrative and production facilities of smaller companies. At least seven national and international corporations moved their corporate hesdcuarters to the New York area last year. One moved out.

During the most recent 18month period for which there are statistics, 52 smaller companies established manufacturing plants in the region and 281 companies carried cut or began major exparsions of their plants. All this happened in the manufacturing sector of New York's economy. For the faster-growing and slightly larger service sector-faster-growing according to payroll information-there are no comparable statistics.

This growth took place although 1971 was another recession year and one in which New York shared the troubles of all the country's metropolitan areas.

GM Ohio Plant Shut by Strike

LORDSTOWN, Ohio, March 5 (UPI).—The United Auto Workers union struck the huge Gen-eral Motors complex here yesterday throwing 10,000 employees out of work and shntting down the only Chevrolet Vega assembly line in the nation.

Local 1112 of the UAW authorized the strike because of a longstanding dispute over productionline methods. The line produces 100 of the small Vegas an hour. Union officials cootended that the General Motors assembly division cut back Vega production line employment by more than 800 jobs hut still expected to produce 100 cars an hour. They said that the cutback constituted a speedup. Workers could not keep up with the production line and some of the councilon me and some of the cars were defective, the union argued. GM accused workers of "shoddy workman-ship" and "sabotage."

U.S., Japan Sign Pact On Migratory Birds

TOKYO, March 5 (Reuters) .-The United States and Japan yesterday signed a treaty to protest migratory birds, the first of its kind signed by Japan with another country.

The government plans to conclude similar agreements with the Soviet Union and China.

The treaty called for a ban on catching and controls on the sale and exchange of 189 species of birds that migrate between the United States and Japan.

McLaren and Felix G. Rohatyn, the III director with whom Mr. Kleindienst has acknowledged holding five meetings last year to discuss the TTT settlement.

Although he earlier wrote the democratic national chairman, Lawrence O'Brien, that the ITT negotiations were handled "ex-ciusively" by Judge McLaren, Mr. Kleindienst testified last week that he "set into motion a series of events" leading to consideration of ITT's argument that it should be permitted to retain the Hart-ford Fira Insurance Co.

That "series of events" included a meeting in Mr. Kleindienst's office last April 29, at which Judge McLaren and his staff listened to an argument of "financial hardship" from Mr. Rohatyn and other III officials.

After the meeting, Judge Mc Laren testified iast week, he called for an evaluation of TTT's case from the Treasury Department and from Mr. Ramsden.

Kennedy Attacks U.S. Cuts In Medical Aid to Vietnam

By John W. Finney
WASHINGTON, March 5 seven years. Elimination of these WATH Sen. Edward M. Ken- military medical teams, the report (NYT) .- Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D., Mass., who is chairman of the Senate judiciary subcommittee on refugees, protested yes-terday that the administration was ignoring humanitarian responsibilities in Vietnam by "sahotaging" and reducing health pro-grams treating civilian war casualties. "The administration is establishing a national policy of walking away from our humanitarian responsibilities to the people of Vietnam—to the human debris of a senseless and continuing war, he said. "Hospitals are being closed, programs are being eliminated and millions are going to suffer because our government is choosing to fuel a war instead of ending it and repairing a broken

Sen. Kennedy offered his criticisms in making public a report by the General Accounting Office—the investigative agency of Congress—on the civilian health and casualty treatment program in South Vietnam.

The report found that civilian war casualties were continuing at a high level but that the United States was reducing its support of civilian health programs as it pursued a policy of military withdrawal from Vietnam.

3,508 Monthly

On the basis of official statistics on hospital admissions, the report said, there have been 234,235 civilian war casualties from the heginning of 1968 through August, 1971, and casualties through the first eight months of 1971 were running at a monthly average of 3,508. The report found, however, that these official statistics were "misleading and understat-ed" for they do not reflect ca-sualties that never reach hospi-

While the U.S. Agency for In-ternational Development does not have a specific program for dealing with civilian war casualties, the report noted that from fiscal year 1968 through fiscal 1971, the agency earmarked $8 million to assist the South Vietnamese government in providing medical care to the civilian population. For the current fiscal year, AID plans to provide $14.1 million, which the report noted is a reduction from the $20-million average of previous years.

In response to budget reductions and presidential directives to reduce overseas personnel, the report said, the agency has decreased its health personnel in Vietnam by 56 percent since 1970 and further decreases are planned.

Adverse Effect "U.S. advisers generally agreed that the loss of AID medical personnel may have an adverse effect on the level of medical care in Vietnam," the report said, "particularly in rural areas where Vietnamese medical personnel Health programs are not well established.

Similarly, the report found that the Department of Defense was reducing its financial support of civilian health programs in Vietnam.

From fiscal year 1968 through fiscal 1971, the Department of Defense provided 552.7 million in assistance for civilian health programs, with 40 percent of these funds being spent by the Army for medical supplies and equipment under a cooperative program with the agency. While the pro-gram continnes, the report said the Army believes it "is no ionger equitable" because "army forces are not a significant contributing factor to [civilian] casualties . . .

Reflecting a "general trend" in the military health program, the report noted, the Defense Department planned this year to discontinue its Medical Civic Action Program and Military Provincial Health Assistance Program teams that have been operating in Vietnam for more than

While conditions in South Viet. namese medical facilities have 'generally improved" in the last year, the report said, "the shortege of manpower, facilities and medicines can be only accentuated as the United States withdraws personnel and reduces its financial support."

The report noted that the United States has been providing 86 percent of all the medical commodifies used in the South Viet-namese Ministry of Health system and that "U.S. commedity assistance will he reduced substantially this year, with nn aiternative source to fill the gap."

Sen. Kennedy said that the General Accounting Office "makes a mockery of our government's claims about the conditions among Vietnamese civilians and about the progress and stability of the Saigon government in meeting urgent human needs caused by the violence of continuing war.

"In contrast to the strong resolve and high priority our government is giving to support, fa-clitate and upgrade the South Vietnamese military under the Vietnamization policy to continue the war-on the civilian side we see vast human need put in the lowest category of concern, slashing budget cuts and no long-range plans to cope with messive human needs which have accumulated after years of war and neglect'

The candidates themselves toured shopping centers and main streets before huddling with their advisers on preparations for today's debate, which could be the campaign's decisive event.

Mr. Nixon's Republican chal-Jengers—liberal Rep. Paul N. (Pete) McCloskey, of California, and conservative Rep. John M. Ashbrook, of Ohio—completed their stumping and returned to Washington, where they will he guests today on the CBS interview program "Face the Nation" Sendoff for Nixon

By every available measure, the New Hampshire Republicans are prepared to give Mr. Nixon's reelection campaign as handsoma a sendorf as they did in launching him on the road to the White House in 1968 with a 79 percent victory. Three published polls, the most recent a week old, show Mr. Nizon holding steady with about 70 percent of the vote; and reporters have been unable to discern any last-minute swing to. etther Rep. Ashbrook or Rep.

Rep. McCloskey has said he will quit the race if he draws less than 20 percent of the vote here —a distinct possibility, because the polls, have shown him no higher than 16 percent. The congressman, who has been campaigning here since last June against continuation of any U.S. military operations in Indochina, must decide by next Friday whether to run for re-election to the U.S. House from California. Tuesday may be his last hurrah.

Conservative challenger Rep. Ashbrook, who has drawn only 5 percent of the vote in the polls, told reporters he has no "self-destruct button" such as Rep. McCloskey's 20 percent figure.

Florida Prospects

But a very weak showing in this. state where the leading newspaper, the Manchester Union Leader, has endorsed Rep. Ashbrook and echoed his charges of a Nixon "sellout" of Taiwanwould make it difficult for the conservative hopeful to carry his campaign beyond the March 14 Florida primary, Rep. McCloskey's and Rep.

Ashbrook's anxieties are minor compared with those suffered by Sen. Muskle, who entered the New Hampshire race in January as a solid favorite for a big victory and has seen his lead dwindle steadily. A mid-January Globe poll put him at 65 percent. An early Rebruary survey for the New Hampshire public television network measured him at 58 percent. A survey taken for the lished, had him down to 49 percent. And the interviewing done the past two days, published in Sunday's Globe, dropped Sen. Muskle to 42 percent.

That rapid falloff has been attributed by New Hampshire observers to several factors: the cutbacks in the Maine senator's campaign time in New Hampshire as demands from other early primary states where he is entered curtailed his appearances here; his reputation for vagueness on some issues and his returned bate his New Hampshire opponents, a decision he reversed ten days ago when his New Hamp-shire advisers saw the danger to his position, and his running feud with Union Leader publisher William Loeb, climaxed by Sen. Muskie's tearful defense of his wife against Mr. Loeh's attacks, a defense made in front of Mr. Loeb's building a week ago. It was an appearance some of Sen. Muskie's managers concede may have backfired. The attrition in Sen. Muskle's. strength eppears to have been so sweeping that it might even knock him out of first place, except that his main challenger, Sen. McGovern, has only inter-mittently shown signs of catching fire with the New Hampshire

In the same sequences of four polls in which Sen. Muskie dropped from 65 to 42 percent, Sen. McGovern went from 18 percent to 19 percent to 31 perceot and then, in the latest Globe sur-vey, back down to 26 percent.

Sen. McGovern has been the aggressor in the race, moving in on what was regarded as Sen. The case was one of the first Muskie's home turn over a year of the state's "newsman's privi- ago to set up local organizations which, most observers agree, have

Sen. McGovern has also forced the issues, backing Sen. Muskie into tonight's debate and now applying pressure on him, so far without success, to follow Sen. McGovern's example in disclosing his campaign contributors. In the last three days Sen.

McGovern has spoken of a "surge" of support that might make the race a "cliffhanger," but to others voter opinion seems more to be sagging than surging.

In any event, Sen. McGovern has evidently moved into a position to achieve his minimum goal of a strong second-place showing in an area of presumed Muskie strength.

The other three campaignsfor Mayor Yorty, Sen. Hartke and write-in candidate Rep. Mills-remain enigmatic, because noce of the three men has established himself in the minds of the voters here es a serious candidate for Mayor Yorty's poll strength is less than that, but most observers think the polls understate his likely vote. Sen. Hartke has been campaigning with a handful of aides and supporters, handing out Polaroid snapshots of himself and the voter and making little visible headway.

The Mills write-in, backed by the heaviest advertising hudget of any campaign and by a cadre of Manchester ward leaders, is aimed at a 10 perceot showingenough to give some hope to later Mills efforts in Tennessee and other primary states. Turks Assail Britain Over 14-Year-Old

Hit 'Meddling' in Case Of Boy Drug Peddler

ISTANBUL, March 5 (AP) — Turkey lashed back angrily today at what it called Britain's "meddling" in the case of Timothy Davey, the 14-year-old English boy sentenced to six Years in prison for selling drugs.

Sources close to Premier Nihat Erim said he had decided to cancel a stopover in London oo his way to the United States late this month. A top Erim alde said the premier was infuriated by what he considered "insults" to Turkey over the case. It had aroused a storm of protest in the British press, which termed the sentence monstrous."

The British Embassy in Arkara, which has been in cootact with the Turkish government over Davey, said today it had "no knowledge" of the stopover Mr. Erim had apparently planned to make in Britain before the deterioration in relations.

Points at Ireland A Turkish Foreign Ministry statement said that if Britain is so concerned about humanitarian-ism it should stop the "barbaric sleughter" of young people in Northern Ireland.

The statement said comments by British politicians and editors criticizing the sentence were "damaging the legal possibilities for reduction of the sentence."

Government sources said the case is turning into a major problem in Turkish-British relationships. Turkey, which was subject to humiliating legal agreements with the Western powers in the days of the late Ottoman Empire, is touchy to any interference with its, often antiquated legal $75-tem.

"If people still do not understand that Turkey will not allow itself to be treated in 19th-century style, let them look at our history," the Foreign Ministry statement said.

Turn for Worse

Turkish press reaction to the Davey case, until now mildly curious and even sympathetic, took a turn for the worse today when the mass-circulation Hurriyet accused British journalism of staging "a theatrical production" to its treatment of Mrs. Jill Davey, the boy's onother.

Mrs. Davey visited Timothy in prison yesterday. British news-men crowded around her after Hurriyet sald Mrs. Davey made a tape recording of Timothy crying and distributed it to the press. Mrs. Davey said in reply today that the tape recorder she was carrying contained a recording of Tim's brothers' and sisters' greetings. The recorder had no microphone, she said, and he-sides she was not allowed to take it into the interview room.

Informer Tells Of Kissinger 'Kidnap' Details

HARRISBURG, Pa. March 5 (AP).—FRI informer Boyd Doug-les fr. says anti-war priest Philip Berrigan agreed with him that a plan to kidnap presidential ad-viser Henry Kissinger could not be accomplished without a gun and suggested "we should use blanks instead of loaded bullets."

"I told Philip Berrigan I was sure I could obtain a gun to use in the kidnapping if it was requested of me," the government's chief witness testified Friday before the conspiracy trial of Father Berrigan and six others recessed for the weekend. He quoted Father Berrigan as describing the kidnap scheme, al-legedly outlined in a letter from another defendant, as "brilliant" but acknowledged it "opens the door to murder."

Court Voids Ban On U.S. Pension For Alger Hiss

WASHINGTON, March 5 (UPI).—A three-jodge federal court ruled Friday that the U.S. government must pay e pension to Alger Hiss, a State Department official convicted of perjury in 1950 during an investigation of Communism.

The judges ruled unconstitu-tional the "Filss Act" passed by Congress in 1954, which was intended to prevent his receiving a pension for government service. The court said the act amounted to punishment for actions committed before it was passed, a type of legislation forbiden by the Constitution.

Under the ruling, which may he appealed by the Justice Department, Hiss will receive about $5,000 in oack pension benefits and about $80 dollars a month in the future.

Riss, 67 is a printing salesman and lives in New York. He was convicted of falsely testifying that he had not passed State Department documents to Whittaker Chambers, a former Com-munist party member who testified against him during congressional hearings.

He said that while he supported the uranium mine strike, which was called under the motto "not a gram for the occupants," and iasied eight days, he did not organize it. All Czechoslovak uranium except for minute quantities for experimental purposes is exported to the Soviet Union.

The deeper reason for his arrest, he maintained, was his attempt to free the uranium industry from what he considered a colonial relationship with the

Attempt for Independence

His account of the Soviet-Czechosiovak nuclear relationship disclosed an attempt, resisted by the Russians, to attain economic independence two years before the reforms that caused the Sovietied invasion.

Mr. Bocek who began work at the Jachymov Mine in 1951, rose to technical director of the industry in 1960 and became directorgeneral lo 1968, said that his own career showed how the Soviet Union dominated it.

Until he became technical director, the holder of that post, the most important because the director-general was always a Communist dignitary with no other qualifications, had always been a Russian. He was named he said, hacause by 1960 the Jachymov Mine, until then the most productive, was heading toward depistion and the future of uranium mining in Czechoslovakia looked dim.

Pribam Field Discovered After his appointment, however, the Priham field about 40 miles from Prague was discovered to hold rich deposits end was put into production. The Soviet Union treated Czechoslovakia like a colony, Mr. Bocek said, hecause it took out more than SO percent of the ore in unprocessed form, allowing only 4 to 9 percent of the poorest to go into the first step of reficing in Czechoslovakia.

Furthermore, he said, the Russians took all possible measures to prevent the Czechoslovaks from developing their own nuclear power, although he and officials in Prague agreed in 1966 that it was occessary for the country's economic future.

Purchases From France When apprised of the project, Mr. Bocek sald, the Soviet Union made its hostility plain. When Prague made an initial purchase from France in 1967, Alexander Churin, first deputy minister of medium industry, the Soviet ministry in charge of atomio matters, hastened to Czechoslovakia and promised technical aid.

At the same time the minister told the Czechoslovaks not to produce their own nuclear fuel and offered to seil Soviet fuel. The offer was declined. Mr.

When construction of an experimental nuclear-fuel plant began at Zbraslav, outside Prague, Soviet officials accused Mr. Bocek to his superior of pre-paring to undermine the socialist community and intending to sell nnciear fuel to the West.

After the reform leadership ooder Alexaoder Dubcek came to power early in 1968. Mr. Bocek intensified the effort by reaching preliminary egreement with Canada and making some contects with Westinghouse for the construction of independent nuclear-power plants. The occupation ended the program.

Islam Decides

BEIRUT, March 5 (AP) .- The 31-nation Islamic foreign ministers' conference unanimously decided yesterday to pool money in a "holy-war fund" for undermining Israel, the Saudi staterun radio reported.

The conference wound up six days of deliberations with strongworded resolutions denouncing U.S. support of Israel and vowing to bolster Palestinian guerrilla raids against the Jewish state, said the radio.

A resolution prescribed a "jihad" (holy war) as the ultimate weapon for surmounting "Israel's stubborn occupation" of Arab lands. It urged Moslem peoples and governments all over the world to contribute generously to establish the holy-war fund. the radio reported.

The conference was held in the Saudi Red Sea port city of Jidda. The secretary general of the Arab League, Abdel Khalik Hassouna, and a representative of the Palestinian guerrilla groups attended

Behind a sea of red and black flags, with thousands shouting revolutionary slogans and singing revolutionary songs, the march ended four and a half miles and three hours later at Pere-Lachaise Cemetery, one of the holy places of the French left ever since the survivors of the Paris Commune were executed there in 1871.

Police estimated the crowd at 18,000, a conservative figure. A crowd of a half million was claimed by the organizers representing a dozen anarchist, Maois and Trotskyite groups as well as members of the Socialist and Radical parties.

Conspicuous by their absence were the Communist party and the Communist-dominated General Confederation of Labor, France's most powerful tradeunion federation.

Their boycott was but the latest example of an escaleting campaign of hostility against the extreme left in the eight days since Mr. Overney's death.

Such indeed was the case when the late Gen, de Gaulle espoused a seemingly hopeless cause and scored an unprecedented victory in the June elections that year.

It was probably the better part nf valor for the government to lift the normal ban on funeral processions in the streets. But cyules suggested that the Gaullists were not above enjoying the chance to emharrass the Communists by aiding their arch-enemies on the left.

By the demonstration's very discipline, the extreme left suc-cceded for the first time in showing the public that it too could eschew violence if it so

Despite thousands of armed and helmeted riot police on duty all along the line of march and at the cametery, only a brief scuffle involving a dozen anarchists was reported.

Design for Parliament Annex Expected to Divide Londoners

LONDON, March 5 (AP).-A design for an extension to London's Houses of Parliament today appeared to have thrust Britain onto the threshold of a great architectural controversy. The Thoughts (Perhaps) of Mao, Nixon, Chou, Others...

By Max Frankel

WASHINGTON (NYT).—The exhaustion of the China trip seems finally to have spread from the travelers to the rest of the world. The run on sea slugs at restaurants here appears about over. The price of Mao buttons is coming down. The jealousy in the House that the Senate leaders alone were invited to make the follow-up journey is subriding. And the diplomatic fallout, from Seoul to Saigon, has been less than lethal.

What remains, already richly adorned by interpretation, is an artful Nixoo-Chou communique, pledging coexistence and staking out rival definitions thereof in relation to Vietnam, Korea and Japan. The most delicate passages deal with Taiwan in a way that allows each side to claim concessions by the other. The Chinese told the Americans to get off their island—yielding ground even by appearing to negotiate this "internal" Issue. The President granted the principle of "one China" and promised to withdraw American forces eventually, provided the Chinese granted the "prospect" of a peaceful settlement between Peking and Telpel. They did.

But the thoughts of the leading participants, and some conspicuous nonparticipants, in reflecting on the event, and its implications remain concealed, like the record of the Nixon-Chou talks itself. Alas, the great voyage cannot be consigned to history without some attempt to divine those thoughts. By distilling some fact and projecting some imagination, it seems reasonable to guess that they run

The Thoughts of Chairman Mao

As I have thought before: "How to give tit for tat depends on the situation. Sometimes going to negotiate is tit for tat. Sometimes not going to negotiate is tit for tat." I wish I could have seen the faces on the gang in the Kremlin as they watched the banquets on television. The gang in Tokyo, too!

Nixon is a very shrewd manager of failure. He has failed in the "containment" of the Soviet Union. He has failed in the encirclement of China. The tides of history are forcing retreat from Indochina, from Korea, at the United Nations and in his military spending, and still he presents himself to the world as the tireless seeker of peace and friendship. That is courageous and astute leadership. For he cannot stand above every battle, the way I do.

How could I ever mistake these Americans for the No. 1 enemy? It is their opportunism that misleads. They do whatever is cor or necessary, hut with such ideological passion that they frighten everyone into thinking them irrational. Now that they love everything Chinese, we shall have to take care that they do not smother us

It should he easy now to play off the Japanese against the Americans, to pull the rug out from under Chiang Kai-shek. With luck, we shall deny the Russians the influence in Asia they hoped to inherit from the departing Americans. There will be no big-power deals at our expense. And our revolution is secure at last, at least against foreign challenge.

The Thoughts of President Nixon

Not a bad week's work. We've finally got Vietnam off the front onges and those fellows in Hanol must be sweating a bit. If only Chou could persuade them to release the prisoners...

I think we've got the Russians in just the right mood now Imagine my having better relations with Mao than the Kremlin's! They seem very worried about all this in Moscow and their fears of encirclement should yield a fairly good eettlement oo arms control, in time for my visit. But the Chinese eeem even more worrled about the Russians, Man and Chou were not about to let me leave without a fairly friendly communique at the end, eveo though they knew they weren't going to get Taiwan in less than a generation. What's more, they prohably had a higger political problem about all this than I did. I notice that their bot-head crowd in Shanghai went out of its way to applaud our communiqué. That's quite a shift for those radicals. Not to mention their mentor, Madame Mao, leading the Nixons to a theater party!

Chou En-lai must be the world's best informed statesman. Reminds me of De Gaulle. If he could keep his mental powers and live long enough, he and I could go far in rearranging the Pacific. Never misleads you, like the Japanese. Tough but straight, gracious. It must be tough to have such a passionate old man as Mao watching your every move while trying to bring a country out of the chaos of that Cultural Revolution. Come to think of it, we have a lot in

The Thoughts of Premier Chou

Perpetual missionaries, these Americans. How can they think that exchanging badminton teams and surgeons is worth a principled surrender on Taiwan? They can't possibly. Obviously they, too, are worried by the Russians and the Japanese and they know that one China is worth 10 times as much as a half Korea, a half Vietnam, an impoverished Indonesia, a fumbling, impossible India. They were wrong about us and therefore about Asia for 20 years and with Kissinger's brains and Nixon's courage they turned themselves around.

Oddly, the Republicans have always been wiser in office than They were wise to realize that we could he more forthcoming while Mao is alive and prepared to bless this new arrangement. They also seemed very well informed on our politics, knowing the sensibilities of the Shanghat radicals, knowing not to expect too much of a country whose hureaucracy has been decimated by internal

Now perhaps we can look beyond the Taiwan obsession to our real interest in the world and heyond this constant self-purging and purification toward a decent industrial development. We have much to learn from the West and the Americans are not the British; they will not hurt us now that they have conquered their religious fear

And they gave us more on Taiwan than they may know. Chinese are Chinese and our cousins in Taipei will see the handwriting on the wall. They will come around to talk to us before long and the Americans will be pushing them with all the enthusiasm of badminton

The Thoughts of Henry Kissinger

I did it! Twenty years of madness, blindness, war and "Who lost China?" and "Running dogs of imperialism" and in 20 hours with Chou in the July heat, everything thawed. We are very clearly both subordinates, but we did it, sensing the drift of history and its imperatives.

It is odd now to see friends itching to organize a political campaign on "Who lost Taiwan?" Actually, if we had proposed such a

a tolke en tolker. Takon like egyelektigar would now be accused of having devised a formula for perpetuel involvement. Chou knows we cannot give him Taiwan and that it is time to move to more serious husiness. And the President now knows that we have all been paranoid about the Chinese—they ware much more for their principles and their dignity than for conquest. war against them in Korea could have been avoided. The Indians were more to hlame in their war with China. And we had no business getting involved in the Taiwan affair. If the Russians had not been so blind and insensitive in handling the Chinese, we would never have found our opportunity, but the Russians lack subtlety with

The Thoughts of President Chiang

It was good while it lasted and all is not lost if we play it right The Americans can afford to sell us ont, but they cannot afford the charge of opportunism at the expense of friends and allies in general.
We shall he able to remain independent and safe, or to trade upon the dwindling American presence for the best of both worlds.

The Thoughts of Premier Sato

The choice, basically, is between a Russia that has always done damage to Japan and an erratic America that consumes our trade and provides our essential defense. There is no choice. The Chinese will use the American link against us, to play upon the nerves of cur people. But if they really wish to develop as a nation, they need us as much as we fear them. We will do better business in China than

The Thoughts of Comrade Brezhnev

Stay calm. The Americans are young and foolish . They will learn, when they have had our experience, what wild men these.

Chinese can be, Genuine Communists may yet emerge in Peling after this self-anointed Mao departs. Meanwhile, we are not doing badly, in India and Indochina and Japan and Central Europe. Realism in Washington may be just as profitable and far less danger-ous than idealism. But what mischief did they really agree on? Can we really match the cooking in Peking?

The Clifford Irving Case

One Man's Friendship, Scoop, Suspicion

By Robert Kirsch

LOS ANGELES.—January, 1972. according to my horoscope. was supposed to be a month of great upheavais and strange events. It's enough to make you believe in astrology.

Until the evening of Jan. 3 of this year, I didn't even know about the purported "Autoblogra-phy of Howard R. Hughes," assembled complied or written by Clifford Irving. On that night I was in Geneva with my family, having just returned from Zermatt. where the skiing was so-so. (In mystery stories that kind of detail is essectial.)

John Goldman, the Los Angeles Times's man in New York. called ma and said that there was a great stir about a book re-puted to be the real autobiogra-phy of "Howard R. Hughes" from oow on I always write that name in quotes; you can guess why) by Clifford Irving, who claimed to bave gotten to the recluse aod spent 100 hours taping his reminiscences

Clifford Irving? He was a friend of mine, and-for the first time in 10 years-I had seen him the previous June, when he and a companion-writer, Richard Suskind, met me and my wifa for dinner here.

Irving said he was working on a book about "American bil-lionaires: Hunt, Getty and Howard Hughes." Suskind, who looks like a chubby Sancho Panza, was his "research assis-Irving sald he was a hit depressed hecause he had had no luck cootacting Howard Hughes Now back to Geneva and the telephone. John Goldman asked me about Cliff and whether I thought he was capable of a gigantic hoax. I said I didn't think eo. What I knew of him, which was little enough, was that he was plaesaot, engaging, a fair novelist, amhitlous and a bit selfpromoting in subtle ways (no unusual trait for a free-lance wilter). I knew little about his private life and his activities. But the statement to me that he had no luck contacting "Hughes" seemed very significant in light of his claims about the get him to let me read the manuscript and the sources. He gave me a list of questions, filled me in on the background and it was foreign-correspondent time.

Two hours later, John called again and said the Times would like me to go to Ibiza, find Cliff.

I found Irving's finca easily enough. The cab driver knew immediately that he was the tail American driving the big Mercedes who lived on the San Jose road. Clifford was oo his way to get some medicine for his youngest soo, Barney, and we drove to a pharmacy together-When you meet someone under those circumstances, it is difficult to think of boaxes and con cames.

I let bim know immediately that I was there as a newspaperman and told him the object of my visit was to read the manuscript and the sources. He digested that information, while I asked him the big question. Why, if be bad already contacted "Hughes" and had had interviews before I saw bim in June, did be tell me that he was wor. iog on an "American billionaire" book and had had oo luck contacting "Hughes"? He shrugged, smiled a boy's smile and sald that he had hated to mislead me, but the project was so top-secret that be had evolved that cover story to explain his travels.

Finally, Irving let me read the nanuscript and transcript and all the "letters" and the rest. under the condition I described in my article from Iblaa. His wife, Edith was never enthusiastic about my reading the materlal. And Irving watched me closely while I did.

It was a complete scoop. I bad expected reportere to be camped on the doorstep when I arrived. There was no one there. The rest of the press showed up about a week later, and a few, as you will see, only toward the end, I dictated the story and made ready to leave Ibiza Jan. 8. But then came the news of the impending "Hughes" telephone press conference and I was instructed to remain on Ibiza.

At that point, as I wrote in my article, I was strongly convinced of the authenticity of the book. The manuscript itself would not have been convincing. It was interesting but innocuous compared to the 989-page transcript which was filled with everything from scatological gossip about Holly-wood to "inside" husiness and political "reminisceoces" plus highly technical accounts of flying and engineering activities, and meandering philosophizing. There also were notes in "Hughes" handwriting.

All Suspicious

My days were spent checking out leads, interviewing characters and speculating with other reporters, who by ..ow had discovered Ibiza, about the truth of the whole absurd affair. It was like living i., the middle of a cheap mystery novel, much less pleasant than reading one. Everyb iy suspected everyone else. Reporters checked each other out. The nights were spent on the telephone with our respective editors.

The crucial point began on the evening of Jan. 24. Report. from the Zurich police linked Edith Irving with the "H. R. Hughes" account at Crédit Suisse. A oew batch of reporters came in: Swiss. German, American television crews and a mysterious Englishman who looked someone out of a Le Carré oovel.

Next day the repuls grew more insistent. The Irvings made plans to leave for New York between televisioo interviews and impromptu press conferences, and alarms and excursions. I managed to ask Irving if Edith was involved with the bank account; he swore she was not. Then the mysterious Englishman turned up the finca. It appeared that he was not mysterious at all: He identified himself as Roger Beardwood if Time magazine. I asked him about his "gumshoe" activities or the island the night before and apparently upset him in the process. That was to have repercussions later.

In any case, the Irvings left for New York and I hopefully assumed that the madness was over. I wanted to get off Ibiza, and off the story. Then Irving's house of cards began to toppla in New York. He admitted that Edith had opened the account and withdrawn the money. The telephones raog again and the etory flared ooce more. We were sent on the trail of Elmyr de Hory, a celebrated art forger who was the subject of "Fake!," an Irving book; of Richard Suskind, Irving's researcher, and of Gerry Albertini, Irving's neighbor at whose home the transcript was kept in a safe.

and finally the center of the story went over to New York, I returned to Caux to do some skiing, exhausted, puzzled and wondering what would happen

I didn't have loog to wonder. A small nightmare began when a friend phoned me, long distance, to report that Time magazine had published a line describing me as drifting in and out of the tizht little Ibiza clique and a photograph which put me into display with three people I hardly knew and one I have never seen, met or heard of,

have known better if be had asked any questions or had come to the island earlier. I had met Albertini only twice, and our conversations were limited to the cost of living on Ibiza, Elmyr de Hory I interviewed briefly the street to avoid me. Euskind a few times, and be was fairly uncommunicative about anything concerning the "Hughes" book.

Nixon's 'Ostpolitik' Spurs Japanese

TOKYO (NYT).—On the night the Sino-American communique was released in Shanghai last week newsmen of the boisterous Japanese press swarmed into the sleek and modern Ministry of Fereign Affairs to berate the minister, Takeo Pukuda.

Hadn't Japan been left behind by President Nixon's contacts with Peking? they demanded. Hadn't Washington held Tokyo back from normalizing relations with China, while forging ahead itself? Mr. Fukuda was calm and professed to be undisturbed.

"There are many routes for climbing Mount Puji," he said quietly.

Ever since last July, when President Nixon shocked Japan by reversing his field on China, Premier Elsaku Sato, his conservative government and the Japanese establishment of businessmen and bureaucrats have As the President's departure time for Peking drew near, the sconario unfolded.

First, Japan gave a gracious welcome to Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who surprised everyone by smiling instead of scowling, as on previous occasions. There was a public commitment to exchange visits by premiers and to start this year the long-delayed negotiations on a Soviet-Japanese peace treaty. even though a northern territo-rial dispute still lies unresolved. This was followed by pleasant negotiating between top Japanese businessmen and a Soviet economic delegation over the latter's suggestion that Japan put up $1 billioo to finance vast Siberian. oil fields. The project, which is designed to supply some of Japan's energy needs, is a long way off. The government is wary, both politically and eco-nomically, of guaranteeing such an investment, but the businessmen at least won Russian permission to survey the oil reserves they are being asked to finance. In the meantime, Tokyo dispatched its first government mission to Hanoi-the trip incurred some American displeasure—to lay the groundwork for economic participation in North Vietnam's postwar rehabilitation.

The government then extended diplomatic recognition to Mongolia, the first Asian Communist regime that Tokyo has recognized, and thereby annoyed its old Nationalist friends on Taiwan.

To some observers, all this added up to less than met the eye. Although Japan was giving the impression of playing the balanceof-power game Itself, the Foreign Ministry denied any premoditation in the bunching of theramoves. In fact, the Gromyko visit .came on Moscow's sudden initiative.

Others, bowever, saw a common thread and that, of course, is-China: Although Japan has been successful in developing a two-way trade of $900 million a year, itsefforts at governmental contacts -in effect, looking toward ourmal relations-have been rejected.

The Japanese press is beside itself in frustratioo—and the gov-ernment is oot far belind—tink Japan's overtures toward Pekinghave been spurned while President Nixon has been welcomed. China professes to fear revived Japanese militarism and Japanese economic hegemony in Asia. Peking also objects to Tokyos 1952 peace treaty with Taiwari as the legitimate government of China.

To overcome these obstacles, some. American diplomats believe, Japan has been at pains to demonstrate that it can have friendly and normal relations with Asia's Communist nations and that Japan itself is a big power that eventually must be accommodated... Amid great confusion over what this country's intentions really are. Japanese politicians, in trying to "clarify"; their attitude on Taiwan in a way that will not offend Peking, are trying themselvee into knots, and Japan's biggest banks and corporations, lured by the prespect of China trade, are getting as skittish about business with South Korea as with Taiwan.

Historically, Japan bas been fearful of Russia and mesmerzed hy China. This still seems true. While the most important relationship for Japan is certainly that with the United States, the thrust of Japanese diplomatic energies today is toward Peking

By Robert Reinhold PAMBRIDGE, Mass. (NYT). A major computer study of world trends has concluded, as many have feared, that mankind probably faces an uncontrollable and disastious collapse of its society within 100 years unless it moves speedily to establish a "global equilibrium" in which the growth of population and of industrial output are halted. Such is the urgency of the situation, the study's sponsors say, e that the slowing of growth constitutes the "primary task facing humanity" and will demand international cooperation no a seale and scope without precedent." They concede that such a task will require "a Copernican revolution of the mind."

The study, which is being a sharply challenged by other experts, was an attempt to peer into the future by building a mathematical model of the world system, examining the highly complex interrelations among population, food supply, natural resources, pollution and industrial production.

The conclusions are relandling -2 t an intellectual debate over a question that is at least as old as the earty economists, Thomas Will human population ultiearth's finite resources will be totally consumed and, if so, how near is the day of doom?

Club of Rome

The study was conducted at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology under the auspices of the Clob of Rome. In the findings, to be published Thursday by the L ?? Potomac Associates under the title "The Limits to Growth," the MIT group argues that the limits are very near-unless the "will" is generated to begin a "conorderly transition from growth to global equilibrium."

1. What Happens Without Regulation ****************

This computer "run" by MIT group, using five key growth factors to the year 2100, shows rapidly diminishing resources eventually slowing growth, assuming no major change in physical, economic or social relationships. Time lags in decline of population and pollution are attributed to natural delays in the system. Population rise is finally halted by an increase in the death rate.

The study would seem to bolster some of the warnings of environmentalists. In Britain, for example, a group of 33 leading scientists issued a "blueprint for survival in January, calling on the nation to halve its population and heavily tax the use of raw

Ball in Heath's Court

Dublin Quietly Waits For a United Ireland

By Bernard D. Nossiter

DUBLIN (WP) -Everybody here tants and Catholics to rule the talks about uniting divided.

Ireland but nobody is willing to do very much about it-

From Premier Jack Lynch on == down, Dubliners say that the ball is in London's court. This tight relittle world is, in the words of day waiting for Mr. Heath."The British prime minister is ex--i -pected to make his long-delayed :: move to resolve the deadlock this week and Dublin is praying for a big one. The only adventurous policy to be found here is the government's cautious revelation that there are Communist states in the world and Irishmen will have to live with them. A Soviet trade delegation has been here this last week. A trade agreement is expected in the next few months. By the end of the year, the best informed officials expect that Ireland will establish full diplomatic relations with Moscow. Nothing bappens here without reference to the all-engrossing theme, the division of Ireland. So there is quiet satisfaction that one by-product of the Russian talks is that they are a mild way of proclaiming to London that Dublin is a capital with its own mind. The hope is that this will be one more factor persuading Mr. Heath to pick the boldest possible option for his Ulster plan.

In the view of officials, politiclans and editors of all persuasions here, it is only right and proper that London—not Dublin should heal the wounds. Britain, it is said, created the split 50 years ago between what is now the Catholic republic and the Protestant-dominated Ulster province. It is Britain that props up the Uister regime in Stormont Castle, a facade of a government that neither collects nor allocates income taxes and obviously cannot maintain order. Thus, the argument here runs, it is Britain's thillity to end the bloodshed that its creature has inspired.

Remarkable Accord

Again, there is a remarkable sgreement among all those in the mainstream of political life here the two Sinn Feins and their IRA armies enjoy sympathy but are not yet serious political vehicles about what Mr. Heath

> Firstly, it is said, he should make a brave start toward ending internment, the process of holding persons indefinitely in concentration camps without charge or trial. A brave start would mean releasing a substantial number of lesser fry and charging the rest with specific crimes.

The republic has had its own experiences with the IRA and understands why terrorist leaders cannot be brought to trials in which no Catholic juryman would convict. So the unofficial Dublin suggestion is charge the worst offenders but do not hurry the judicial process. Such a move on internment is seen as a necessary precondition for Ulster's Roman Catholic leaders to enter talks about the province's future. Next, "we take it as read that Stormont cannot work," one of the key officials here said. There is a widespread opinion that no effort to preserve the provincial regime will do Instead Dublin pay to gain the six counties it hopes that Mr. Heath will sub- will then be possible to make a commission of Protes- major changes.

"It's just utter nonsense," remarked one leading economist, who asked that he not be identified. He added that he fett there was little evidence that the MIT computer model represented reality or that it was based scientific data that could be Another economist. Simon S. Kuznets of Hervard, a Nobel Prize-winning authority on the economic growth of nations, said he had not examined the MIT work first hand, but he expressed doubt .. about the wisdom of stopping growth.

"It's a simplistic kind of conclusion—you have problems, and you solve them by stopping all sources of change," be said. Others, like Henry C. Wallich of Yale, say a no-growth economy is hard to imagine, much less achieve, and might serve to lock poor cultures into their

"I get some solace from the fact 'that' these scares have happened many times before-this Malthus again," he said.

Malthus, the 19th-century British economist, theorized somewhat prematurely that population growth at rates that could be graphically represented as a curve would soon outstrip available food supply. He did not foresee the Industrial Revolu-

Prof. Dennis L. Meadows, management specialist who directed the MTT study-which is the first phase of the Club of Rome's "Project on the Predicament of Mankind"-conceded that the model was "imperfect," much "resi world" data and was better than any previous similar attempt.

The report contends that the "cannot wait for perfect world models and total understanding." To this Dr. Mesdows added an interview; "Our view is that we don't have any alternative-it's not as though we can choose to keep growing or not. We are certainly going to stop growing. The question is, do we do it in a way that is most consistent with our goals or do we just let nature take its course."

Letting nature take its course, the MIT group says, will probably mean a precipitous drop in population before the year 2100. presumably through disease and starvation. The computer indi-cates that the following would happen:

· With growing population, industrial capacity rises, along with tts demand for oil, metals and other resources.

 As weils ano mines are exhausted, prices go up, leaving less money for reinvestment in future • Finally, when investment falls below depreciation of manufacturing facilities, the industrial base collapses, along with services and agriculture.

• Later. population from lack of food and medical

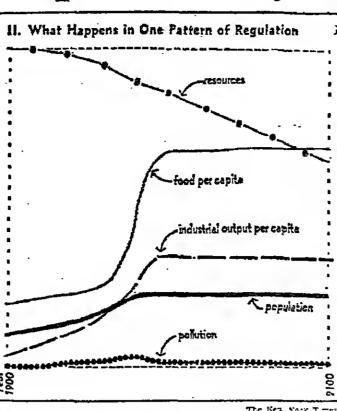

All this grows out of an adaptation of a sophirticated method of coming to grips with complexity called "systems analysis." In it, a complex system is broken into components and the relationships between them reduced to mathematical equations to give an approximation, or model, of

Then a computer is used to manipulate the elements to simulate bow the system will change with time. It can show how a given policy change might affect all other factors.

If human behavior is considered a system, then birth and death rates, food and industrial

Sheriff's Marijuana Gone

BURNEY, Calif., March 5 (UPI). - Embarrassed Shasta county sheriff's deputies said Friday that 70 pounds of marijuana confiscated during a raid last summer have been stolen from an evidence storage room in the sheriff's substation. "We know how it (the marijuana) got out of there," said deputy Larry Ross, "Some guy picked the lock got in and got it. It's not anywhere to be found. I imagine it

Another computer "run" by the MIT group projects a relatively stable inture on the assumption that "technology policies" are combined with other growth-regulating mechanisms. The study says policies would include resources recycling, pollution control devices, increased lifetimes of all forms of capital, and methods to restore and renew eroded and infertile soil.

production, pollution and use of naturat resources are all part of a great intertocking web in which change in any one factor will bave some impact on the others. For example, industrial output infloences food production, which in turn affects human mortality. This uitimately controls population tevel, which returns to affect industrial output, completing what is known as an "automatic feedback loop."

Drawing on the work of Prof. Jay W. Forrester of MIT, who lation, the MIT team huilt docers of loops that they believe describe the interactions in the world

They then attempted to assign equations to each of the 100 or "causal tinks" between the variables in the loops, taking into account such things as psychulogical factors in fertility and the

Critics say this is perhaps the weakest part of the study because the equations are based in large part on opinion rather than proved fatt, unavailable in most cases. Dr. Mendows counters that the numbers are good because the model fits the actual trends from 1909 to 1970.

The model was used to test the impact of Tarious alternative future policies designed to ward aff the world collapse envisioned if no action is taken.

For example, it is often argued that continuing technological advances, such as nuclear power, will keep pushing back the Ilmits 11 economic and population

Little Benefit

To test this argument, the MIT team assumed that resources were doubled and that recycling seduced demand for them to onefourth. The computer run found little benefit in this since pollution became overwhelming and equiped collapse.

Adding pollution control to the assumptions was no better: food production dropped. Even assuming "unlimited" resources, pollution control, better agriculturat productivity and effective birth control, the world system eventually grinds to a halt with rise in poliution, falling food output and falling population.

"Our attempts to use even the most optimistic estimates of the renefits of technology," the repert said, "did not in any case acsipane the collapse beyond the Sheptics argue that there is no way to imagine what kind of spectacular new technologies are ever the horizon.

If we were building and making cars the way we did 20 years ago we would have run cut of steel before now. I imagine, but you get substitution of matermls," said Robert M. Solow, an

MIT economist not connected with the Club of Rome project. At any rate, the MIT group went on to test the impact of other approaches, such as stabilizing population and industrial capacity. Zero population growth alone did very little, since inoustrial output continued to grow, it was found. If both population and industrial growth are stabilized by 1935, then world stability is achieved for a time, but sooner or later resource shortages develop, the study said.

Ultimately, by testing different variations, the team came up with a system that they believe capable of satisfying the basic material requirements of mankind yet sustainable without sudden collapse. They said such a world would require the following:

 Stabilization of population and industrial capacity. Sharp reduction in pollution and in resource consumption per unit of industrial output. o Introduction of efficient technological methods-recycling of resources, pollution centrol, restoration of eroded land and prolonged use of capital.

S Shift in emphasis away from factory-produced goods tofood and nonmaterial services, such as education and

The report is vague about how all this is to be achieved in a world in which leaders often disagree even over the shape of a conference table.

Even so, critics are not sancuine about what kind of a world it would be. Dr, Meadows agrees it would not be a Utopia, but nevertheless does not foresee

"A society released from struggling with the many problems caused by growth may have more energy and ingenuity available for solving other problems." he says, citing such pursuits as education, religion.

Many economists doubt that a no-growth world is possible. Given human motivations and diversity, they say, there will always be instability. "The only way to make it stable is to assume that people will become very routine-minded, with no independent thought and very little freedom, each generation ooing exactly what the last did," says Dr. Wallich "I can't say I'm enamored with that vision." What of Africa?

"Can you expect billions of Asiens and Africans to live forever at roughly their standard of living while we go on forever at ours?" asked Dr. Solow.

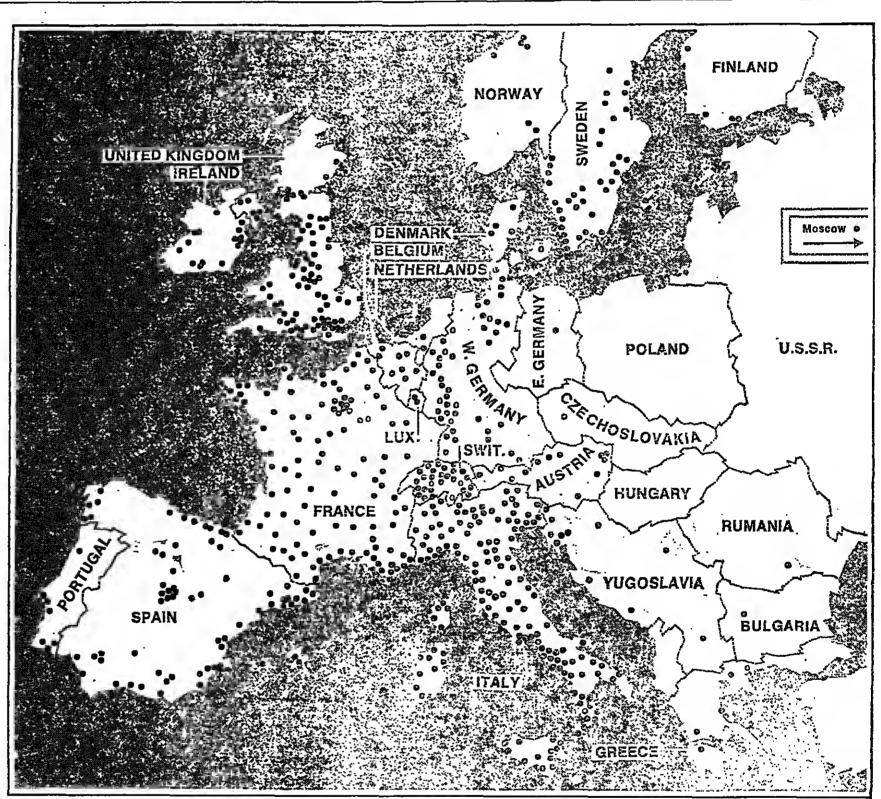

Dr. Wallich terms no-growth "an upper-income bab;" adding: "They've got enough money, and now they want a world fit for them to travel in and look at the poor.

The MIT team agrees that there is no assurance that "humanity's moral resources would be sufficient to solve the problem of income distribution." But, it contends, "there is even less assurance that such social problems will be solved in the present state of growth, which is strainresources of the world's people." The report ends hopefully, stating that man has what is

L'Affaire Kleindienst

Richard G. Kleindienst was not a particularly popular choice, among Senate liberals, to succeed John N. Mitcheil as Attorney General. So when Jack Anderson, the columnist, published a memorandum, allegedly written by a lobbyist for the International Telephone and Telegraph company. which seemed to connect Mr. Kleindlenst with a settlement of anti-trust suits against the ITT and the pledge of substantial contributions by an ITT subsidiary toward the forthcoming Republican National Convention in San Dicgo, it appeared to give the attorney general-designate's opponents an excellent handle and promise a possible issue in the political campalan.

Mr. Kleindienst very properly called for a reopening of hearings on his nomination hy the Senate Judiciary Committee, and these will resume this week. There is a fine air of drama about the core question-the asserted author of the memorandum has heen run to earth in a Denver bospital hy the FBI, and "mystery witnesses" are promised when the hearings hegin again. But this central theme-the fitness of Richard Kleindienst to head the Department of Justice-is already being swallowed up by much more serions and difficult problems illuminated by the affair. What, for exampie, is, or should be, the status of that relatively new form of aggregations of capital known as the conglomerate under the antitrust laws? How does, and should, an administration responsible for enforcing the laws deal with the problem? And, of course, there is the old question of how political campalgns should he financed, and what effect the current methods have upon laws and politics.

Anti-trust legislation in the United States was originally aimed at the accumulation by single companies, or groups of companies conspiring together to control particular markets-that is, dominating the manufacture and sale of steel, or petroleum products, or whatever. The conglomerate added a new factor, and one whose impact upon the economy-the terms of "restraint of trada" -is far more difficult to assess. The subsidiary of ITT involved in the present case is a hotel company, which can argue that it has a direct economic incentive to hoost the husiness of its San Diego outlet hy attracting Republicane to that city. The husinesses involved in the suits against FFT were an insurance company, a food and vending company, and one making water

To deal with the question, there is an anti-trust division in the Department of Justice. But the economic implications of either pressing anti-trust suits or settling them out of court ohviously go far beyond purely legal issues. The Treasury Department was consulted in this case; a consultant paid by the Commerce Department drew up an important report, and that consultant dealt wholly with a White House economic adviser. In other words, one sprawling bureaucracy tried to cope with another sprawling bureaucracy, and whatever high-level decisions were made, the intervening steps are very difficult to follow.

When to this muddle is added the question of who should contribute to campaign funds, and how l'affaire Kleindienst clearly involves much more than Mr. Kleindienst, And if it can provide some threads wherehy to penetrate the labyrinth of conglomerate government and conglomerate business, it will have served a useful purpose.

Indochina at the Summit

President Nixon's "journey for peace" has ended but American hombs are still falling throughout Indochina and Communist troops are still massing and maneuvering in Sonth Vletnam for an expected offensive that could pose a formidable challenge to the Vietnamization program.

It is not surprising that the Indochina war continues after the Peking summit. It would be surprising, however, if this persisting conflict, which still involves massive American power in combat on China's doorstep, had not been a major topic in the lengthy discussions between the President's party and top Chinese officials.

Washington and Peking have gone to some trouble to insist that no deals on Indochina were made at Peking. Their communique reiterates the support of each party for its friends in the area and for rival peace proposals that are still far apart. Certainly there is reason to question Peking's ability to force major concessions on Hanoi, even if it wanted to. And Mr. Nixon has appeared determined to persist in his efforts to preserve a non-Communist regime in Saigon. apparently confident that Vietnamization. hacked by American air power, will succeed if he fails to get a peace settlement on U.S. terms.

reasons to seek an early conclusion of the conflict. For Mr. Nixon, the war he has not ended still looms as a potentially damaging issue in his re-election bid. Peking must be concerned, even more than Washington, about the growing influence of Moscow in the Indochina states as local Communist forces become increasingly dependent on the support that only Moscow can supply to counter American military technology. In addition, as has been noted tardily in Washington, China may be even beginning to share the U.S. government's interest in preserving the independence of Vietnam, and of the other states of Indochina, in order to forestall the formation of one strong state. Communist or not, on China's southern

These converging and overlapping interests should impel both governments to try to reach a compromise settlement for all of Indochina. If the Peking summit did not actually set this process in motion, it has at least set the stage of peace, since the Chinese-American rapprochement which it dramatized has removed the original rationale for American intervention in South-

Malfatti's Resignation

This resignation does not contribute to improve the image of an institution which wants itself to be the superior guarantor of Europe's interest. . . It remains to hope that Mr. Malfatti will acquire an influential position in Italy. Maybe it would bring his country to respect at last some of its European Common Market ohligations: Snch as the introduction of the value-added tax system, the preferential treatment for agriculture products from Common Markat countries, and the regularity in applying European customs rules.. .

-From La Cité (Brussels). * * *

Malfatti fears that if he doesn't take part in the Italian elections he will be politically dead. From the start it had heen clear that his appointment to the Common Market (Commission) presidency was against his own taste. It was certain that he did not have the ambition to go into a European career. . .

-From De Standaard (Brussels). * * *

The resignation of Malfatti takes place in two steps: Until May 7 he takes leave, effective May 8th he resigns. This is strange. One can see no legalistic reasons for this. As Mr. Malfatti has decided to reeign, he would have hetter resigned at once. Tha situation would have been clearer.

Now questions can he raised, distressing assumptions be made: For the two months that Malfatti will take leave, he will continue to receive his Common Market pay, which is roughly 200,000 francs monthly. Prohably Malfatti will use part of his pay to finance his electioneering costs.

Ostpolitik

Herr Brandt's West German coalition government is living through dangerous times, politically speaking. Herr Strauss was not exaggerating when he described the situation as a "knife-edge" one.

It is typical of Russia's bullying and hamfisted methods when dealing with someone Moscow thinks is in a weak position that Russian spokesmen should at once have begun to mutter dire threats. Russia has, of course, made implementation of the Berin agreement dependent on ratification of the treaties—a unilateral Russian decision made in defiance of the interests of the three Western powers who have a concern for Berlin and Germany as a whole. Britain, America and France, in their turn, have tacitly made activation of the Berlin agreements a prerequisite to talks about European détente. Much can he at stake, therefore,

Futile Agony of the Primaries

By James Reston

WASHINGTON.—The agony of the long presidential primary elections is now on top of us and about all the poor candidates and voters can do is to cry for help.

Even before the first vote in New Hampshire, most of the candidates are complaining that they are broke and exhausted. In the last presidential year of 1968, were 14 preferential elections, but this year there are 24, and any state that wants a little more publicity or a little extra business can join the list.

The theory of the primaries is that they will help the voters decide on the men and issues of the future, and submit the candidates to the hard tests of public scrutiny and debate.

Well, New Hampshire and Florida have already heen an endurance test, but neither primary has produced a single speech worth printing, and after Edmund Muskie wins in New Hampshire and George Wallace in Florida, ahout all it will mean is that the voters prefer candidates who come from their own regions of the vantages to the primaries. They open up the presidential race to new men and, on the side, give the people a glimpse of potential national leaders such as former Gov. Terry Senford of North Carolina, now president of Duke University, Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida and Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota, one of the few senators who ought to be in the race and isn't.

Also, the pressure of the primaries undoubtedly gives men like Sen, Muskie a wider audience and tests their capacity to endure the physical and mental tortures of high office.

Candidates' Belief

But it is arguable that the things that make a successful candidate make a successful president, and it could even he argued that the increasingly long and vicious primary process weakens a man's capacity to govern after he finally wins.

doing on TV and the polls. Are the voters of Florida and New Hampshire batter qualified to judge who has the ability and character to be president than tha party leaders who really know them? It is a very old question.

For example, Hubert Humphrey now seems, even to many of his former supporters, to be a rather dim figure out of the past, a grandfather with dyed hair pretending to be a joyful swinger. But if you could get an honest secret vote by all the members of the Senate on who is better qualified to be a strong and effective president than any of President Nixon's other challengers. the chances are that Hubert Humphrey would run well ahead of Muskie or anybody else.

The primaries, however, focus attention on less important questions: How do the candidates look? How do they stand with this or that hioc of voters? Where are they on "busing," a phony issue that Gov. Wallace will probably ride to victory in Florida. So what's the answer? Certain-iv not the boss-dominated nominating conventions of the past. And probably not Woodrow Wilson's national primary in which the voters in all states would pick the presidential and vice-presidential candidates on the same day, eliminating the nominating c-nventions.

Better System

But a national primary that would recommend the candidates to democratically selected delegates to the conventions would, it seems here, be much hetter than the present expensive, corrupting and exhausting state primary system. After all, when we finally come to the end of all 23 primaries in California

June, the results will probably he contradictory and, in any event, the conventions will still be free to pick anybody they like.

Still it seems easier to reform anything in America than the financing and selecting of presidential candidates. Nixon has scuttled his pest record and embraced John Maynard Keynes, Mao Tse-tung and even John B. Connally, hut providing the leadership to reform the financing and procedures of presidential campaigns seems to he beyond him.

So the old horing treadmill begins tomorrow and Muskie is complaining—and fair enough too—that, even if he wins, his votes will be discounted as little more than neighborly courtesy.

About the most you can say for these traveling spectaculars is that the TV stations and newspapers like the primaries—they don't make sense, but they make news-and advertising!

'At the Proper Moment'

By C. L. Sulzberger

HONG KONG.—The most interesting political event of President Nixon's China trip was his meeting with Chairman Mao Tse-tung. The President's actual negotiations were with Premier Chou En-lai but, when Chou arranged that Mao should give the talks and their subsequent accord the imprimatur of his vast pres tige, the matter assumed more vital importance.

This gave the colloquy and the future agreements that will undoubtedly stem from it a sanctification that a mere Chou-Nixon understanding would lack. And it enormously strengthened Chou's own hand against political enemies at home.

The premier is in a curious position. Without really aspiring to it, he has won the battle to succeed the venerable and partially ailing Mao. He apparently doesn't seek power although it seems to come to him unsolicited because he is unusually able. He is almost as old as the chairman, more vigorous, and is now in a position to use Mao's support to strengthen and assure his new and relatively conventional policy's success.

who were opposing it, a group symbolized by Lin Piao, Mao's designated beir until his disgrace. Chou is assuredly not going to take over from Mao. Nevertheless, he will almost certainly be at the center of any collective leadership that emerges and will thus have the necessary influence to carry out his program of construction at home and peace abroad, even at the apparent expense to revolutionary ardor.

Already there is evidence that Mao is not really running things m any active sense and has not been doing so for many months. that his periods of intellectual energy and clarity are gradually becoming shorter. Yet Mao has now been made to appear as sponsor of the dramatic Chou-Nixon encounter and, thereby, of all that eventually stems from it.

In no sense should this be interpreted as implying that a younger Mao Tse-tung in office at this time would have contemplated a different line. The Chinese are aware of the hostility of the Soviet Union and of the weakness that would result from their continued isloation in this evolving world. They can obviously see the logic of making up with their former enemy No. 1, the United States.

It says: 'In accordance with Chairman Mao's teaching of 'maintaining independence and keeping the initiative in our own hands and relying on our own efforts," China's working class designed and built the Nanking Yangtze River Bridge with their own hands." That prond claim is saved from valinglory by economic reality. The Yangtze divides north China, which is rich in industrial rate materials, from south China, which is rich in foodstuffs. Unlike the pyramids or the Great-Wall, the Nanking hildge serves a vital utilitarian purpose, Every day 100 trains cross the railway deck of the bridge. The top deck a four-lane highway, is probably the husiest stretch of road I have seen in China, Not for nothing does the official statement on the bridge quote a poem by Chairman Mao: "A bridge will fly to join the north and aouth/a deep chaem becomes a thoroughfare."

But right there a negative point asserts itself. In a country that is the size of a continent with the largest populace in the world, there are only bridges cross a chasm that runs right across its center Other lines of communication-to the provinces of the far west, for example, and within mountainous regions—are far more tenuous. Thus, despite enormous progress, China is still not a cohesive whole.

In talking about the bridge, moreover, our guldes tell us ofbitter disputes that attended the construction—tha width of the top roadway; how to build the approaches; whether to put the redflag mosaics atop the bridge

Wall Street's Surge and Upward Indicators Brighten Business and Investor Hopes in U.S.

By Thomas E. Mullaney

NEW YORK, March 5 (NYT) .-The New York Stock Exchange's powerful performance shared the spotlight with several other bullish developments in finance and achieved in February, 1966. business last week and cast a rosy glow over the general economic scene, brightening business and investor sentiment. Although some current data on the economy are not so sparkling as many analysts would like. the direction of the indicators is highly encouraging-predominantly npward—and confidence is becoming more widespread that the trend will gain momentum. One particularly favorable sign was the drop in the unemployment rate to 5.7 percent in Febru-ery from 5.9 percent the month

The strength of the stock market's recent rise was masked to some extent by the lagging gait of the widely watched Dow Jones industrial average of 30 stocks, but it was mirrored precisely in several of the broader-based market indexes. Both the industrial component of the New York Stock Exchange index, comprising 1,047 issues, and the Standard & Poor's 425- industrial berometer pushed through to historic peaks on Wednesday and again on Friday.

Laggards Incinded

Such blue-chip market measures es the Dow Jones industrials and The New York Times combined average of 50 stocks, both of which include such laggards as American Telephone, Alcca, Bethlehem Steel, United States

U.S. Business Chiefs Reassure Europeaus

By Clyde H. Farnsworth VERSAILLES, France, March 5 NYT1,-American multipational corporations think they have the muscle to defeat the Burke-Hartke bill this year in Congress and are chiefly worried about the possibility that the tax provisions, which would trim multinational legisiation. This was one of the main points American business chiefs made to their European counterparts at an unusually high-level private meeting last week which was called to reduce Atlantic frictions in the commercial and monetary fields.

Informants said that the Europeans left no doubt that their governments would be forced to retaliate if protectionist quotas on imports, as envisaged in the Burke-Hartke bill, were enacted. Sen. Vance Hartke, D., Ind., and Rep. James A. Burke, D., Mass., have introduced proposed legislation, which aims at protecting jobs by choking off imports and penalizing foreign investments of American companies.

Repeal of Credits

The bill would hit the multinational companies financially by repealing the credits granted for taxes paid abroad and by requiring the corporations to pay american taxes when the income s earned and not, as now, when it is repairiated.

A 40-man American delegation met with about 50 European business leaders at the Trianon Palace Hotel here next to the famous park and chateau that Louis XIV built about 15 miles mest of Paris.

"One of the most important elements for economic progress in world affairs is the maintenance and enhancement of good relations between the European Community and the United States, William Blackie, chairman of Caterpillar Tractor Co., told the delegates in a keynote address.

The industrialists had met many times before, but this marks the first time that they have sat down together with the sole object of discussing the major economic issues dividing the Atlantic world-and trying to do something to solve them,

The three-day meeting could make an impact, since the injustrialists on both sides of the

Many of the Americans here are members of the Emergency Committee for American Trade, a body formed to battle protec-tionism in the late 1960s and including such figures as J. Kenneth Jamieson, chalrman of sails, might be appended to other Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey); David Rockefeller, chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank;

Donald M. Kendall, chairman of Pepsico, Inc., and Carl A. Gerstacker, chalrman of the Dow Chemical Co. (all of whom were here. In the late 1960s, when the Common Market was considering a tax on soybeans, which would have reduced one of the biggest American farm exports to Europe, these men and their colleagues quietly went to European innustrialists and warned them that if the tax was imposed it would he catastrophic for Americancommunity relations. As a result of this behind-thc-scenes pressure the tax is still on the back burner in Brussels.

The Americans here see more such free trade action growing ont of this week's meeting. United Europe

In a welcoming speech, Count René Boel, honorary chairman of the Solvay Co., the Belgian chemical glant, said:

"I have always believed not only in the future of a united Europe, but also in the possibility of establishing and preserving, between this integrated Europe and the rest of the world, counections that would be harmonious and so widely profitable for all coontries.

Count René was joined in the European ranks by such figures as Giovanni Agnelli, president of Fiat of Turin Wilfried Baumgartner, president of Rhone Poulenc of Paris; Sir Arthur Norman, chairman of De La Rue governor of the Scriété Générale de Belgique. After a plenary session, the meeting divided into working groups on monetary, trade and multinational investment problama. All the sessions were closed to the press. Officials of international organizations and governments were also encluded. Many of the Americans in the group were those who confronted Japanese business leaders last June in Washington to riemand an easing of Japanese trade restrictions. The American corporate pressure was seen as responsible for some Japanese liberalization,

Japanese newsmen later referred to it as a meeting with America, There was some tough talk but for the most part, informants said, the meetings were low-keyed because as one American put it:

"We're not here to negotiate anything but simply to try to understand each other e little better." One of the points American officials sought to explain was the probable timing of new American trade legislation, which would enable the United States to enter into negotiations with the Common Market and Japan over new world trade rules. Informants said that the Americans reported that there was little likelihood of trade legislation being passed this year. The nearest time would be the end of next year. In other words, the Americans most concerned with the problem do not envisage negotiations before 1974 or 1975. Many of the Europeans had been under the impression the talks

market continuing a steady rise this year—perhaps even reaching the 1,100 level in the Dow index as Secretary of the Treasury John B. Connally suggested recently. But others are not so sure, thinking that the current momentum may lose some steam before it can muster any renewed force for a drive even on the magic 1.000 barrier.

South held a freakish hand in the diagramed deal, and brought home a doubled game contract that could have been defeated. West defended normally, but he could have set the contract with a different lead.

West might have opened one no-trump, but probably considered his 18-point hand and two tens slightly too strong. When he opened one diamond North made an eccentric overcall of one notrump. His point-count and distribution were appropriate, but he lacked the diamond stopper that this bid indicates.

East naturally bid two hearts, suggesting a bad hand with a long heart suit, and South took a shot at four spades. He could not tell how well the hands would fit, but he expected the dummy to produce the ace or king of dia-

West was irritated to discover in the post-mortem that he could have led any card in the other three suits and defeated the contract: Even such ridiculous leads as the spade jack or the club five would leave the declarer with no way to make 10 tricks.

SOULS ON FIRE

By Elie Wiesel. Translated by Marion Wiesel. Random House, . 268 pp. $7.95.

Reviewed by Charles E. Silberman

THE judgment has been offered before: Elie Wiesel is one of the great writers of this generation. With the publication of "Souls on Fire," that judgment is confirmed; his work takes on a new dimension that makes comparison with Camus inevita-

Until now, Wiesel's greatness had rested on the unique role that his life and talents had forced upon him that of witness to the Holocaust, messenger to the living from the dead. What has lifted him above the ranks of every other writer of the Holo-caust has been his obsession with life rather than death. If every literary trail led him back to the Holocaust, it was in a desperate attempt to confer a retroactive meaning on the unrelieved horror of those years.

The effort was in vain. Nothing has been learned." he lament-ed two years ago, in "One Genera-tion After," "Auschwitz has not even served as warning." But Wiesel somehow has survived this negation, even as he has survived the Holocaust itself. Like Camus, he insists on being a spokesman for man rather than against him. Running through all of Wiesel's books, therefore, some-times explicitly, sometimes only barely hinted at, has been an-other search—a search for sanity in the face of insanity, for faith and commitment in a world that makes faith impossible and absurd. In one way or another, each of his books has addressed itself to the question with which Camus and other existential philosophers have struggled: How can one be, how can one affirm life, after having experienced unrelieved and absolute evil that, as Wiesel wrote in his first book, "Night," "consumed my faith forever" and "deprived me, for all eternity, of the desire to live"?

Souls on Fire" is the product of that search, and the answer to it. Like a true existentialist, Wiesel is relentless in insisting that man must himself create the meaning he once derived from faith; unlike most existentialists, he is equally relentless in repudiating absurdity. His central theme, in fact, is that "man owes it to himself to reject despair." Difficult, yes, but "there is no alternative: one must impose a meaning on what perhaps has none and draw ecstasy from nameless, faceless pain." How is this possible? . . For

Wiesel, through an exploration of the Hasidic world in which he was raised. In "Souls on Fire." he takes non-Hasidic readers on a "pilgrimage to the sources of Hasidic experience," weaving of how the movement developed. Although the book is an outgrowth of Wiesel's celebrated lectures on Hasidism at the Sorbonne and New York's 92nd Street YMHA, it does not suffer from that fact; like almost all his writing, the book cries to be read

As Wiesel emphasizes over and over again, the greatest Hasidic masters questioned, argued with and even threatened God, and fell prey to frequent and sometimes lengthy periods of melancholla. "To induce others to believe is easier than to believe," Wiesel re-calls his Hasidic grandfather telling him. To challenge God "is permissible, even required," Wiesel insists. "He who says no to God is not necessarily a renegade. Everything depends on the way he says it and why. One can say anything as long as it is for man. not against him. . . It all depends on where the rebel chooses to stand. From inside his community, he may say everything."

"Hasidism does not fear con-tradictions," teaching instead that "contradictions are an intrinsic part of man," and of life, Wiesel writes. Like most Jewish mystical movements (and unlike most Oriental), Hasidism is a mysticism that emphasizes the here and now, a search for the invisible and the eternal by way of the mundane and the visible. Above all, it is a mysticism that emphasizes the relationship between man and man. The essence of Hasidism, as Wiesel puts it. is the combination of presence and transformation "In Hasidism, everything becomes possible by the mere presence of someone who knows how to listen, to love and give of himself."

"Hasidism triumphed," Wiesei writes, "because it made itself the advocate of a new Judaism, a smiling Judaism as it were, reconciling man with the idea of happiness. It was, in fact, a resounding call to joy." Not the joy of innocence or of denial, put rather a "laughter that springs from lucid and desperate awareness." a laughter of revolt against a universe where man, whatever he may do, is condemned in 'advance." Hasidism's call to joy came, moreover, at a point in time much like the years of the Holocaust, when widespread persecution and pogroms made it almost impossible to believe or to persevere. As one of the great Hasidic masters and storyteller. Rabbi Nahman of Bratzlay, put it, "Hell exists and it is of this world.

It is this similarity between the state of the world theu and now, not mere nostalgia, that has drawn Wiesel to celebrate Hasidism and retell its tales.

Scholars, to be sure, may quarrel with Wiesel's version of Hastdism, as they quarreled with Buber's, arguing (perhaps correctly) that it is hopelessly romanticized and historically incorrect. Hasidic experience, we intended to be a work or together his own retelling of intended to be a work or together his own retelling of intended to be a work or together his own retelling of intended to be a work or taken to the leading legends themselves, it is a work of art—an extra—in extra = in ordinary man's extraordinary eifort "to humanize fate."

Argentine Referee Stops Bout in 5th

Monzon Beats Moyer to Keep Title As Fight Is Halted on Disputed Call

By Bernard Kirsch ROME, March 5 (IHT).-And everywhere that Carlos went his ref was sure to go. Carlos Monzon of Argentina received some premature help and some ripe oranges last night as he retained his world middleweight boxing championship here. Before Monzon had a chance to cleanly beat Denny Moyer at the Palezzo dello Sport, his private referee stopped scheduled 15-rounder near the end of the fifth round. Moyer, a game, experienced craftsman who fights harder when he is hurt, had been hit by a hard straight right earlier in the round and was eventually "wrestled" to the canvas.

When he got up, he was slightly Wobbiy but when Monzon came in for the kill, Moyer hit back. As the boxer and slugger stood toeto-toe, referee Lorenzo Fortunato of Argentica stepped in and raised his countryman's hand. Monzon gave the crowd of 12,000, who had come to cheer him, a victory salute, and the crowd, not caring that oranges cost the equivalent of 15 cents a pound, began pltching. Monzon, the referee, and the others in the ring began duck-

What Monzon did for his second straight title desense outside his hor. Mand, and what he hopes to do again, is bring his own referee as a chaperon. He hrought an-other Argentine, Victor Avenado, to Monte Carlu last May when he stopped Nino Benvenuti in the third round. Benvenuti's corner then "threw in the towel," and the referee, who has the prorogative of not honoring It, agreed with Benvenuti's corner. Yesterday afternoon, Monzon's

No Help Needed

Monzon is a strong boy who doesn't really need help in the ring. He has won 76 bouts, against three losses-his last in 1964 nine draws and one "no decision." He is a hard hitter. and though he can easily be hit. it doesn't bother him. After starting out clowly against the moreexperienced Meyer, and ignoring several left 100ks which landed solidly, the Argentine began working the body. He ripped into Moyer's stomach in the fourth. Moyer's guard was lowered e little and Monzon aimed for the head in the fifth, and after scoring what the referee called a knockdown - Moyer said be wrestled me down"-the Argentine fighter appeared ready to end the fight. (NYT) -The Villanova mr. lc. which carried Brian McElroy to the finest performance of his track and field career, finally ended vesterday as Pennsylvania unseated the Wildcats as the team champion in the 51st annual IC:-A indoor track mest.

In a tumultuous windup to the two-day meet at Jadwin Gymnaslum, the Quakers finished with 26 points, the lowest winning total in seven years. Vilianova, needing a victory in the two-mile relay to overhat' Penn. finished fourth and had a total of 24 points.

A spill in the final of the 600yard run, which eliminated Greg Govan, the first Villanova quarter-miler, ultimately become the margin of victory for Penn. It was the Quakers' first Intercolleglate Association of Amateur Athletes of America title in 41 years.

Govan, considered a certain point scorer for the Wildcats, led the field through the first 200 yards until Gorden Fauntleroy of La Salle caught the back of Govan's beel. Govao fell, and two other runners went sprawling, including Clyde McPherroo of Adelphi, another favorite. The unlikely winner was Jerald Hassard of Rhode Island. McElroy Wins 1,000

McEiroy, in his first IC4-A competition since transferring to Villanova from Kansas last year, brought Villanova into contention with a brilligot effort in the 1.000-yard run, McElroy's time. 2:05.9, was the fastest ever by a collegian oo a conventional indoor track. It was the fourth fastest ever run by an American on tracks of cight-laps-to-the-mile or smaller.
Rivaling McElroy's performance was a distance double by Grea Fredericks, the Penn State distance ace. Less than one hour after he sprinted away from a two-mile field en route to a 20-yard triumph over John Hartnett of Villanova (In 8:44.31), Fredericks returned and dealt Villanova another stiff blow in the distance mcdley relay. He covered the anchor leg, the mile, in 4:02, for victory. Villarova had won the title 12 of the last 15 years, with a fiveyear streak.

Penn won only one event, the pole vault, on Tom Blair's meetrecord leap of 18 feet 3 1,4 inches.

Rangers Trade McLain, Cash

To A's for 2 Obscure Pitchers

FORT LAUDERDALE, Pla., March 5 (WP) .- Denny Mc-Lain, for whom the Washington Senators gave up the hetter half of their infield and a future 20-game winner after the on, was sent with an estimated $20,000 to the Oakland Athletics resterday for two obscure pitchers. Coming to the Texas Rangers (formerly the Senators) were righthanders Don Stanhouse and Jim Panther, It was another chapter in the controversy-filled career of McLain, a 31-game winner for Detroit in 1968 and a 22-game loser in his only season with the defunct Senators.

In explaining the deal Ranger owner Robert Short said he was going for youth. Stanhouse, who manager Ted Williams thinks will move into his regular rotation, recently was 21.
Panther was 27 Wednesday, McLein will be 28 later this month,

It was Short who, egainst the wishes of manager Williams, obtained bad-boy McLain the spent much of the 1970 season under suspension) and several others for infielders Ed Brinkman and Aurelio Rodriguez and pitchers Jee Coleman and Jim Hannan, Coleman won 20 games for Detroit last year while the two fielders solidified the Tiger infield.

"What today's trade boils down to," said catcher Dick Billings yesterday, "is that we gave up McLoin, Brinkman, Rodriguez and Coleman for Stanhouse, Panther and Eiliott Magdox." Maddox came from Detroit with McLain.

that most of us. dependent upon a computer and a mathematical model for news of Doomsday's imminence, doo't even know what a mathematical model is, or what a computer does with it, or to it,

The grim news comes from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where they know their computers and mathematical models, and grim news it is. The study concluded that the world must come to an end in a catastrophic collapse of human society unless we quickly stop economic and population growth. Wheo we reflect that we haven't even been able to stop the growth of hair oo young men, our ability to stop economic and population growth on the entire planet seems most unlikely.

About 250 men who hold important jobs and titles met at the Smithsonian Institution the other day to talk about the bad news. They did not take it as a toke when informed that the failure of the world would occur within a hundred years unless growth could be stopped and a world-wide equilibrium in distribution of the planet's goods and services could be established.

"The mind boggles," said Elliot Richardson, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, who was there. He was right. Just reading about the prospect from a safe distance is ecough to make the mind boggle.

And yet, the mind stops hoggling very soon, absorbs the fact -Tes, the world really is coming to an end this time"-and

WASHINGTON-Well, it 2p- resumes functioning on the old pears that the world really ante-Doomsday assumption that everything is going to come out all right in the end.

> Typically, on the day the 250 men with important jobs met here to hear about the end of the world, the news that made the front page, the "bard news," as editors call it, dealt with a vision of the world in which man would go oo forever.

The Senate Finance Committee. the papers told us, had that day approved action which, if enacted, would require every American child oo reaching the age of 6 to be fitted with a social security number. This assault on human ldentity was only incidentally an attempt to prepare the next generation for orderly sorting in an ani-beap world.

Its chief purpose was to make it harder for welfare swindlers to cheat the government. The aim of the welfare swindler, of course, is to achieve an equilibrium with the well-to-do in the distribution of the world's goods and services. mittee is moving ahead not only on the assumption that population growth will continue, bot also to prevent establishment of that economic equilibrium which the computer says is all that can

Another story on the same day reported the launching of Piooeer-10, a spacecraft that will carom off Jupiter's gravitational attraction and sail out into the inexpressible infinity of galactic space hearing a message that it is the work of man and woman and listing directions by which remote citizens of the universe may locate us here on Earth.

It would take perhaps 60,000 years, perhaps 150,000, for Ploneer-10 to reach any place with the remotest possibility of intel-ligeot life capable of intercepting it, reading its message and mitiating correspondence with Earth.

An answering message might be radiced back here within 10 or 15 years. Thus, the shot from Cape Kennedy on the day the end of the world was being discussed in Washington assumed that there would be somebody here to listen to the radio in the year 81982 A.D.

That indeed is hope, and foolishness. The mind beggles. Eveo Doomsday seems trivial in these scales. And the seed catalogue yes, this year, this year perhaps, the flowers really may turn out to be just as enchanting as the pictures.

What a piece of foolishness is

Italy Now Accepting Plans To Save Pisa Leaning Tower

By Paul Hofmann

PISA, Italy (NYT).—The view from the leaning tower has changed in recent years, but the confidence of the Pisans that their old landmark will go on leaning forever has not. Yet it is official now that the medieval tower is seriously ailing and will eventually collapse unless a cure is devised.

The government is about to open an international competi-tloo for a project to save the monument, an instantly recognizable symbol for Italy.

"The tower will always stand, or lean," said Marisa Bonanno, a cashier in an espresso bar with a good view of Pisa's main attraction. "But we like people abroad to worry aboot it so they'll think they must come and see it before it falls." Five million tourists visit Pisa every year, and at least half of them have their picture taken while appearing to prop up the tower with their hands.

A local priest, the Rev. Mario Lucchese, observed: "It's an article of faith to the Pisans that nothing will ever happen to the tower. This piece of architecture gives a sense of identity to the people here—without it they would feel they live in just another corner of Italy that is becoming a standardized industrial landscape."

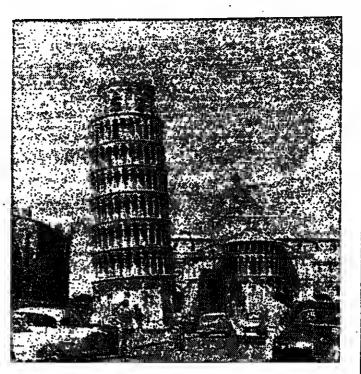

On a clear day-of which there seem to be fewer than formerly—the visitor who climbs the 294 well-worn steps to tha tower platform sees smoke billowing from scores of new factories, and heavy traffic on the superhighways in the plains between the mouth of the Arno River and the marble mountains of Carrara to the north.

However, the pollution and the traffic that are held responsible for the rapid deterioration of so many of Italy's treasures are not blamed for the tower's problems.

For the last six years an international scientific commission has been investigating the condition of the leaning tower for the government. It reported that the tower's main problems are its foundations and the subsoil.

According to the three-volume study that the commission submitted earlier this month, the tower is virtually floating on a hase consisting of sand and highly pliable blue clay soaked with water. Ultrasensitive instruments on the second level of the eight-story tower proved that the monument not only continued to incline one-thirtieth of an inch more every year, but also that it performed a slow gyrating movement.

The tower, huilt between 1174 and 1350, is 179 feet high and leans 14 feet from the perpendicular. It is generally assumed that the foundations on the southern side started sinking by as much as 11 inches a year during the first stages of construction, and that from the third floor up the architects slanted the tower in the opposite direction for stability.

Italian officials have been discussing ways to save the tower from toppling since 1910. Three years ago the Public Works Ministry received a $7-million appropriation for consolidation work. It has not been spent yet.

During the last 60 years, 200,000 people from all over the world have written the mayor of Pisa on how they thought the monument could be saved or straightened—as if anybody here wanted a leaning tower that did not lean.

One Alaskan advised the planting of Canadian poplars around the tower to drain water from the subsoil. A boy from Illinois suggested that a giant helicopter airlift the structure to a safer place. Most of the missives are crank mail, or meant to be funny.

The forthcoming international contest will inevitably bring new spate of bizarre ideas. Never mind, say the officials of the body in charge of the cathedral and the leaning tower, "as long as the world speaks about our monuments it's O.K." In the last few days reputable engineering companies in Italy, the United States, West Germany and other countries have requested copies of the latest study. Some of them are expected to come up with serious stabilization proposals.

British Invade U.S.—With Fish 'n' Chips

NEW YORK (AP).-"After all," said Arthur Treacher, flicking a speck of lint from a well-tailored cuff, "there are American hamburger, pizza and hot dog stands on every street corner in England. It's time the British struck back,"

After enchanting several generations of moviegoers with his portrayal of the perfect English butler, Mr. Treacher is now in the culinary field with a chain of fish 'p' chips houses across America.

Mr. Treacher also is remembered in America as a fixture on the Merv Griftin television show. The combination of tender fish filets crisply fried and accompanied by golden brown potatoes is still a fond memory to thousands of American veterans who served in Britain during World War II. And it leter became a favorite of millions of tourists who journeyed through the English countryside and stopped at a fish 'n' chips house for a snack.

Historically, fried fish was sold in London as early as 1850, and Charles Dickens referred to a "fried fish warehouse" in "Oliver Twist" in the mid-19th century.

Students of English food customs say that mention of French fried potatoes being sold in Lancashire cropped up about the same time. Just when or where the union of the two occurred is not officially known, but ao English trade journal called the Fish Priers Review notes that mention of fish and chips being hawked in the streets of London can.

be traced as far back as 1865. Mr. Treocher appears to be as much of a perfectionist in the preparation of fish and chips as he was in portraying the classic manservant. He regards with disdain such American customs as making fish into cakes, breaded, frozen and then tossed into a

"Not the real thing," he said, adding that the only proper filet to he used is North Atlantic whitefish.

Mr. Treacher also regrets the prejudice some Americans have against the use of malt vinegar, the traditional English condiment for fish and chips. "Americans have become used to tartar sauce on fish and dousing their potatoes in ketchup," he said. "But authentic malt vinegar is essential. It brings the flavor of fish and chips to its proper peak."

Mr. Treacher must be doing something right. Since they were started in June. 1969, his fish 'n' chips houses have spread through 23 states from New Yok to Cali-
